

Do weaknesses in your organization's processes keep you up at night? Do they scare away potential customers?

Hi, I'm Douglas Berry, principal in charge of assurance services at SVA. Organizations today are facing increasing demands to develop and maintain a systematic, powerful, and at times even transparent system of internal control. From stories of fraud in the daily news, to the pressure of accountability requirements such as Sarbanes-Oxley, organizations are being forced to focus more attention on their systems of internal control. Internal controls are designed to prevent and detect errors or fraud, safeguard organizational assets, ensure the reliability and accuracy of financial information, and assist you in meeting organizational objectives.

At SVA we work with organizations large and small, for-profit and nonprofit. Our professionals assist with designing and reviewing systems of internal control to help management gain confidence that the organization systems are effective. We're able to provide a wide array of internal control services from a simple walkthrough of the organization's basic internal controls over financial reporting, to a thorough review of your organization's processes and procedures. We can also tailor a customized internal control service that is able to meet your needs at a cost effective level. Our internal control services have helped organizations to safeguard millions of dollars in assets. We would welcome the opportunity to bring that type of peace of mind to your organization.
